

To help you complete this worksheet, use the Earth's Features book.

An island is a small body of land surrounded by _____.
Islands lie in oceans, _____, and lakes around the world.
New islands may rise when _____ erupt in the sea.

Many islands are _____ that rise from the sea floor.

It's a fact!
The largest island in the world is Greenland. Australia is not considered an island because it is a large continent, like Africa or South America.

Volcanic islands are formed by _____ under the sea.

Some islands are made of _____.

_____ surround many islands. Sand is made of tiny bits of shell, rock, and other materials.

_____ and other kinds of plants grow on islands in warm places.